A Garden of Water that Embodies the Beauty of the Hangang River

Seonyudo Park

From an abandoned water purification plant to an eco-friendly ecological park

Seonyubong, a small mountain peak located in the middle of the Hangang River, was a place praised by artists and poets for its striking scenery. However, during the Japanese colonial period, the peak lost its original form and was used as a water purification plant to supply tap water to the southwestern part of Seoul from 1978 to 2000. Later, the peak, now called “Seonyudo,” was regenerated as an eco-friendly ecological park in April 2002, providing a variety of attractions and entertainment.

Water Purification Basin

A water purification garden created by recycling a chemical sedimentation basin. This is a place where visitors can observe the growth of various aquatic plants that purify water and their purification actions.

Aquatic Botanical Garden

A water purification garden created as a recycled basin. This open-air garden allows visitors to observe various aquatic plants and their growth-up close.

Story Hall of Seonyudo

Renovated from a water pump room that supplied water produced at the water purification plant, the building is currently in use as an exhibition space.

Seonyujeong Pavilion

A reproduction of the old Seonyujeong Pavilion that invites visitors to experience ancient Korean taste for the arts. It is also a rest area that offers a view of Inwangsan, Namsan, Bukhansan, and Dobongsan Mountains in the distance.

Garden of Transition

A garden created by recycling a chemical sedimentation basin. It consists of various gardens decorated with different themes such as the Aromatic Plant Garden, Vine Plant Garden, Colorful Garden, and Sound Garden.

Aquatic Botanical Garden

A water purification garden created as a recycled basin.

Garden of Green Columns

This garden was created by removing the concrete roof of the cleaning bed and leaving only its columns. Now, the garden is a rest area surrounded by green columns covered in ivy.

Seonyugyo Bridge

A pedestrian bridge that crosses over the Hangang River into Seonyudo Park and commands a beautiful view of Seoul, including Bukhansan Mountain.

Seonyujeong Observatory

The observatory is a popular place for relaxation and observation against the scenery of the Hangang River and green fields. It also offers a panoramic view of Seoul.

Garden of Transition

Becoming an island with a beautiful landscape again

It offers a panoramic view of Seoul.

Seoul's parks for you and me

Becoming a green park again

The regeneration park logo, a combination of five different logos symbolizing regeneration and forest, represents an eco-friendly ecological park created by regenerating a space that is not used anymore. The Seonyudo Park is a place that connects the past and present and provides citizens with a rest area where both the city and a forest coexist.
