A Green Junction Where the City Center and Forest Meet

Yeouido Park

From an old airfield to a green rest area in the city center

Yeouido Park, which opened as Yeouido Plaza in 1971 on an old airstrip, has become a venue for various national events and leisure activities for citizens. In January 1999, with the removal of the asphalt, the plaza was reborn as Yeouido Park, a green rest area for Seoul citizens. Today, it functions as a cultural space where anyone can easily encounter nature and enjoy various leisure activities and relaxation, adjacent to broadcasting stations, stock firms, Nodeul Naru where the Hangang Cruise runs, 63 Building, and more.

Natural Ecological Forest

A secret garden in downtown Seoul to observe natural ecosystems

This is a green space designed to enable natural ecosystems to restore their structure and function on their own under a minimized management system. The pond in the garden, inhabited by various creatures, allows visitors to observe and learn about nature in the city center.

[Ecological Pond]

[Rest Ares in the Forest]

Grass Field

A grassland where the city and nature meet

This green space stretching over a low hill where where citizens can rest peacefully consists of a grassy field, a walking trail, and a small pond. Surrounded by evergreens and deciduous trees growing together, the place presents sceneries that change from season to season, as well as a refreshingly green landscape throughout the year.

History of Yeouido Park

From an old airfield to a green rest area in the city center

Yeouido, an alluvial island of the Hangang River, was a barren sandy island often flooded by rains. Back in the day, people used to refer to Yeouido as “my island” (nau seom) or “your island” (neoui seom) as a joke, and its current name “Yeouido” is a combination of Chinese characters for “nau seom” or “neoui seom.” Yeouido is the place where Korea’s first airfield was built and where Korea’s first aviator An Chang-nam demonstrated a flight commemorating his visit to his home country. Yeouido Park, which opened as Yeouido Plaza in 1971 on an old airstrip, has become a venue for various national events and leisure activities for citizens.

Recommended Routes

The trails and bike paths are designed for tours of the park along its outskirts. They are connected to the Hangang Park through an underground walkway located at Exit 9.

● Route for Bike Riders (2.9km)

This is a route for those who want to take a bike tour of the park’s major attractions.

● Route for Pedestrians (2.7km)

This is a route to for those who want to quietly meditate and appreciate the natural sceneries and works of art in every part of the park while taking a walk.

Cultural Event Plaza

A major rest area in Yeouido Park

The plaza serves as a venue for various cultural events and performances in which citizens can participate. As the plaza is home to a national flag pole and an aircraft sculpture, which is a monument to the Korean Air Force, various ceremonies are also held in the plaza.

Traditional Korean Forest

A space to experience the calm atmosphere of a Korean garden

This is a garden designed with the theme of a traditional Korean forest. In the garden are Jidang Pond, which includes three small artificial islands that symbolize Seoul’s past, present, and future, and Samojeong Pavilion where visitors can peacefully appreciate a view of the pond. There is also Yeouijeong Pavilion that offers a full view of the forest.

Becoming a green park again

The regeneration park logo, a combination of two different logos symbolizing regeneration and forest, represents an eco-friendly ecological park created by regenerating a space that is not used anymore. The Gyeongui Line Forest Park is a place that connects the past and present and provides citizens with a rest area where both the city and a forest coexist.
